Monthly Fund Manager's comment

In January, the MSCI AC World Index recorded a performance of +2.95%. The index rallied on news of delayed tariffs, a better-than-expected US reporting season, and strong economic data. All regions posted positive returns, with Europe performing best: the region lacks catalyst to drive earning growth, but the lower positioning and much more attractive valuations suggest that much is already priced in, while a weaker euro is a favourable factor for earning.

From a sectoral standpoint, Media (+8.7%), Diversified Financials (+6.8%), and Banks (+6.6%) led returns, while Semiconductors (-3.5%) and Tech Hardware (-3.0%) underperformed. Market breadth remains low, with only 41% of the stock outperforming the global index, but improved compared to the 34% over the last 12 months.

During the month, the fund outperformed its benchmark by 77 bps, achieving a positive return of 3.7%. The United States led the outperformance, but all geographies contributed positively, through a rewarding stock selection. At a sector level, Healthcare was the main contributor to the outperformance, followed by Consumer Discretionary and Telecommunication Services. Healthcare, after a tough year, was the fourth best performing sector globally (+6.1%), thanks to fading headwinds and increasing visibility. Attractive valuations and positive earning revision also supported the rotation into the sector. On the other side of the distribution, the strong positioning in Technology, that in 2024 recorded a stellar year, weighed down on the fund's performance. The year started on supporting news flow for the sector, related to increasing AI Capex investments from the hyper-scalers, high expectation on the CES-tech-conference and on Trump's declarations related to major private sector initiative called "Stargate" to build AI infrastructure in the United States, with an initial $100 billion commitment that could grow to $500 billion over four years. At the end of January, the advancements of DeepSeek, a company based in China, in the artificial intelligence space, generated volatility in the markets. The company developed an AI model that is cheaper and more efficient than its competitors; this model was supposedly developed in two months instead of a year, using only one-tenth of the computing resources required for Llama-3, Meta's latest AI model. Furthermore, total cost of $5.5 million is remarkably lower compared to the $500 million that would have been needed to train Llama-3. If this information were to be confirmed, major risks would be related to the "powering AI" space, but with innovation comes opportunity. Major US technology leaders, who plan to invest approximately $650 billion in capital expenditures over the 2025-2026 period, could also benefit from the decrease in computing costs and the increase in adoption through a higher return on investment (ROI) for GenAI projects in the Internet and Software sectors, with a particular focus on Google, Meta, Amazon, and Microsoft. Despite the potential negative impact of tariffs on trade and inflation, equity markets could continue to be driven by healthy earnings and macro environment in 2025.
